

The Facility Management Association of Australia's

Environmental Policy

The FMA Australia's Code of Ethics specifies that its members have a responsibility to serve and promote the public interest and community values. Under the Code FMA Australia's members have an obligation to: To meet this obligation FMA Australia's members must strive to give significant consideration to the need to achieve sustainable development.

FMA Australia recognises the importance of caring for the environment and acknowledges that all members have a responsibility to the community to act positively and look for ways to protect and enhance the environments in which they live and work.

FMA Australia shares the desire of the community to develop resources in a way that meets the needs of the present, without compromising the ability of future generations to meet their own needs. Members are encouraged to plan and perform activities so that adverse effects on the environment are either avoided or kept to an acceptable level while meeting all statutory requirements.

FMA Australia promotes sustainable development throughout its workshops, conferences and publications. As the professional body for facility management professionals who manage the physical workplace environment, FMA Australia welcomes the opportunity to play an active part in the development and implementation of public policy and regulation and contribute to the ultimate goal of sustainability.
